COMPLICATIONS EXIST BUT MINERS RETURN

Hesitating Coal Diggers Going Back to Work at Some Points

TREMONT MINE RESUMES

Wednesday Night Meeting Results in Start Being Made ---Local Mine Running

The mining situation of District No. 5, which has been somewhat complicated by a considerable element of the miners repudiating the action of the district officials in regard to an agreement to work at the old scale pending an adjustment subject to approval by a referendum vote, is gradually clearing up and more miners are returning to work. While a number of locals in this community voted to stay out until a wage scale was definitely settled, there are a considerable portion of the miners even in these locals who are not in favor of the action. Miners of various locals who have been hesitating, are now carrying out he advice and action of the district officials and returning to work.

This week the miners of Marianna, Ellsworth and Cokeburg returned to work. The miners of the Yough river district are pretty generally at work as well as in what is called the "Belt Line" district near Pittsburg. Wednesday night a meeting was held at the Tremont mine, between Belle Vernon and Fayette City, and the miners there voted unanimously to return to work. Not only that, but they also passed resolutions severely condemning theaction of the element who have revolted from the leadership of the district officials and are stirring up trouble in the district.

A meeting was scheduled to be held this afternoon at the Bluebird mine of the Belle Vernon Coal and Coke company, at which it is expected that the men will vote to return to work. William Feeney, International organizer of the United Hine Workers, was asked to address the miners at this meeting. The Charleroi mine is working right along, and a number of miners of the Black Diamond mine at Monongahela, which voted to stay out, are going to work at the Charleroi mine.

The district officials are doing all they can to clear up the situation and carry out the policy and instructions of the International convention, as well as keep faith with the operators. They are doing their duty in this respect and the wisdom of their policy is generally recognized and appreciated by the public. There seems to be little doubt but what the referendum vote of the miners will be favorable to the action and the policy of both the International and District organizations, and that an amicable adjustment of a scale for the future will be made.

STEEL COMPANY REMOVES BODIES

A significant move at Newell recently was the removal of the bodies that yet remained in the old graveyard in the tract of land purchased last year by the Pittsburg Steel company of Monessen. This was in compliance with an order from the company and the last of the bodies have been removed. Just what use the Pittsburg Steel company proposes to make of the tract is not known, but it is believed that the officials want to utilize it in the near future.

The most of the bodies that were disinterred were reburied in the cemetery at Brownsville. The old graveyard at Newell which has just been abandoned dates back to pioneer times, the first burials taking place there over 100 years ago.

HAD RECEIVED BLOW BEFORE CAR HIT HIM

Coroner James Heffran was in Monongahela Wednesday and held an inquest into thedeath ofWestley Shaner. A jury composed of Henry Loutitt, Cornelius Carson, John M. Sutman, Sam P. Yohe, William Henning and Herbert C. Shipe, after hearing the evidence returned the following verdict:

"We, the jury, find that Westley Shaner came to his death Sunday night after being fatally injured at Graham crossing on the Monongahela-Donora street car track, death being the result of a fractured skull but the manner in which it occurred was not made plain, and we exonerate the motorman from all blame."

The evidence seemed to show that Shaner had received the blow on the back of the head before the car struck him. Whether it was caused by a fall or by foul play the jury was unable to determine.

An inquiry into the death of Alex. Gyori, of Shire Oaks was continued owing to the absence of Conductor Sax, who was in charge of the train which crushed Gyori. Four witnesses were heard and it was shown by the evidence produced that some one had been negligent. The engineer of the train stated that he was a trifle leery of the imported men of the crew as to their signals but that he was obeying the signals as given, when he backed into the cars that caused the death of Gyori. A further hearing will be held in this case and an effort made to place the responsibility.

NEW SYSTEM BRINGS GOOD ATTENDANCE

Ninth Street School Records Show Perfection Nearly Attained

Success is attending the efforts of pupils of the Ninth street school building in the carrying out of a good attendance system.

The pupils have for several months past been interested in the system, inaugurated and conceived by Miss Edith Woodhall, the principal, which has for its sole object the maintenance of good attendance at all sessions. The principal and her corps of excellent teachers are gratified to note the success which is attending their efforts in this respect.

Briefly, the system is that of awarding flags to the various rooms, in keeping with their record of attendance. This is done at every session, and the pupils throughout the building manifest much interest in the daily contests. A large flag is awarded the room having the highest percentage of pupils in attendance, and smaller ones to the other rooms. Flags are all numbered, therefore, in accordancewith their standing. Then there is constant effort on the part of the pupils to avoid getting the No 12 flag. The primary grade children are deeply interested in the plan, as the following records for March will show: Room 1, Miss Woodhall, teacher, had a perfect percentage, while the rooms of Miss Oller, Miss Rosa Vetter and Miss Mary McGee, had perfect percentages for the girls in their respective rooms. The general average for the building was 99, which is somewhat remarkable when one takes into consideration the fact that there are 530 pupils in daily attendrooms in thebuilding with perfect records for attendance during each month.

County Wide Campaign Inaugurated at the County Seat

ROADMEN HEAR TALKS

State Highway Department Representatives Give Pointed Talks

At the convention of road supervisors of the county held at Washington Wednesday a project was launched in the way of road improvement that promises to meet with tremendous popular approval. This is to have a county wide road construction day, when all citizens, farmers, business and professional men of the rural communities and towns alike, are asked to devote one day to road improvement and construction in the county. This plan has been successfully pursued in the west and south, and the results are surprising as well as substantial and beneficial.

The plan is to have a general holiday declared in every section of the county, when all the male population will turn out to giveone day's work to road construction and improvement. An organization is effected in every community, and the co-operation is asked of boards of trade, business associations, schools, churches, boroughs, councils, school boards, county, town and township officials, and all classes of citizens. Farmers and those who own teams are asked to donate a day's work. All the road equipment of county, townships and boroughs is pressed into service and contractors are asked to donate a day's use of their teams and equipment. Others who can use the pick, shovel and hoe are as welcome as any others.

The women of every section are asked to co-operate and prepare and serve a substantial lunch for the workers. The whole affair is made a gigantic holiday, with the addition of substantial improvement on the most of the roads throughout the county that are in need of such work. Plans are not yet perfected for the Washington county movement, but the project if it meets with general favor will likely be worked up at the earliest possible time.

About 60 supervisors were in attendance at the convention at the countys seat Monday. Addresse were made by Joseph Hunter, first state deputy highway commissioner, G. H. Talbot, a cement agent, Willis Whited, bridge engineer of the state highway department, County Agriculturist J. M. McKee, and A. B. Gray, district engineer of the state highway department.

Officers elected for the ensuing year wede: President, Dr. W. L. Dodd, of

THE DOG OR THE SHEEP

Herbert Quick, editor of the Farm and Fireside, publishes in this week's issue an article entitled, "The Dog or the Sheep, Which?" In it he demonstrates by practical statements from those who would like to raise sheep in various parts of the country from the Atlantic to the Pacific, but are deterred from doing so by fear of damage from dogs, that what might be one of the most important industries in the United States is practically paralyzed because the American people, like the ancient Egyptians, apparently worship the dog.

From the north, south, east and west, comes the same answer to the question as to why more sheep are not produced in that section—dogs. The ravages of dogs have cut down the flocks everywhere and discouraged the farmers from raising more sheep. Thousands of farmers would keep sheep but for the fear of dogs, and in consequence the American people are taxed inordinately for clothing and food. One of the answers received by the editor of the Farm and Fireside in response to his question is from Lee R. Scott of Washington county, Pa., who says:

"In our county the dogs have done more to drive the sheep out than the legislation for free wool has done. A well known wool buyer has told me that the best delaine wool for worsting purposes is produced here and in the panhandle of West Virginia. In 30 years' raising sheep I have had several visits from dogs, one year six times, with appraised losses of about $150. The fear of dogs makes a great many men sell their sheep and keeps others from going into sheep husbandry. I could name perhaps 20 flocks of registered sheep which have been scattered principally on account of dogs."

There is always a waiting list at the county commissioners' office for damage claims for sheep killed by dogs, and the dog tax which is devoted to that purpose is not nearly sufficient to meet the claims. Other replies to Editor Quick's inquiry from all the other states are the same. The farmers are afraid to raise sheep for fear of dogs. A surprising condition is that the farmers do not demand the enactment of laws restraining dogs from running at large. They are apparently indifferent on this subject and the fetich of dog worship continues. In the meantime the people pay the price.

PUBLIC SERVICE.

The action of the Pittsburg council in asking the mayor to remove certain objectional officials who have been appointed presumably for political services rendered is another indication of the trend of the times. More and more is the public demanding better service and efficiency from its officials. The administration of official national state, county or municipal, that starts out to "take care of its friends" for political service or support, is invariably running up against trouble. Unless the appointee can produce the goods in the way of service and efficiency the public will not stand for the appointment.

It is to the credit of the public service everywhere that there is a marked improvement in the character and efficiency of our officials, both elective and appointive. The voters are beginning to discriminate more in this respect as partisanship is becoming eliminated from the public service, which is being conducted more and more along the lines of business efficiency. The man elected or appointed to an important public position invariably finds that he has a sacred obligation to perform that is difficult to set aside for other interests. In our own state the improvement during the present administration in this respect is far and away ahead of all previous administrations, notwithstanding severe criticisms from hostile opponents.

Those who seek office now must make up their minds to give a good account of their stewardship. The public demands this, and it is seeing to it that the demand is being carried out.

PICKED UP IN PASSING

Lawrence, 12 years old, was told to go out and cut wood, and Marshall, ten years old, was told to go and help. Both boys found the ball ground instead of the wood-pile. In the evening when Lawrence came home his mother said, "Well, son, how much have you done today?" He very meekly replied, "I have done nothing." Then in came Marshall, and mother asked him the same question.

"I've been piling it up," he replied promptly.

A gentleman who was becoming rather deaf was crossing over a railroad bridge just as a train underneath uttered a deafening whistle.

"First robin I have heard this spring," murmured the old gentleman.

Eighteen Years Ago we little realized the possibilities for growth of this store of ours. Grow! is what it did, and proves that our theory---right goods at right prices and one price to all---has met with your approval. But our success, no matter how great, cannot rob us of our sense of appreciation. This store is awake to the fact that you---THE PEOPLE---are responsible for our success---and we are turning over to you your share of the profits of the entire month's business: thus do we show, in a slight degree, our appreciation of your loyal patronage.
